Virginia Commonwealth University

Volume 82
Dear Graduates:

Your educational career at the Medical College of Virginia of Virginia Commonwealth University has provided you a strong basis on which to embark on your health-care career. At no time in recent history has the role of the health-care provider in our society been more critical. Health-care reform is having a profound impact on our communities -- and on the way we deliver education in health care. Your time with us has, in may respects, occurred at one of the most challenging -- but exciting -- periods in the history of American academic medical centers and certainly at MCV.

In the past, academic medical centers grew in proportion to new discoveries in basis science and medicine. At MCV, the growing sophistication of hospitals increased the physical plant; the role of nursing in the care of patients was discovered during the Civil War in Richmond's open-air surgeries; dentistry, pharmacy, and allied health became distinct disciplines; and public health assumed a central place in the well-being of our community. Education and research both responded and contributed to these transformations in health care.

Today, we face a quite different set of circumstances. More than medical aspects, health care today has assumed social and economic dimensions. How do we pay for it? How do we deliver it? Who gets access to the system? Most of all, where should we be pursuing research and how do we train future providers?

The University's senior administration has been collaboration with your professors to respond strategically to the challenge of today's environment. How well we manage this period will determine the stability of the medical center. It surely depends on guaranteeing scholarships support for future students, stabilizing the finances of the Medical College of Virginia Hospitals and positioning the medical center to be more competitive, and increasing the presence of generalist providers in our under-served communities.

I believe, however, that the crux of the academic medical center's strategic response will depend on the quality of our graduates -- their training, intelligence, and compassion in the face of enormous change. I am entirely confident that you will stand as equals with your colleagues.

In behalf of the entire University, please accept our heartfelt congratulations on your educational achievement. My very best wishes to you.

Eugene P. Trani

In 1837, December first, the President and Trustees of Hampden-Sydney College created a Medical Department to be located in Richmond, Virginia.

The college opened on November 5, 1838, in the old Union Hotel on the corner of Main and 19th Street. The Medical College of Virginia became an independent institution, chartered on February 25, 1854.
The charter was obtained after a dispute between the faculty at the college and the trustees of Hampden-Sydney about filling a new chair at the school.

The Act of the Assembly allowed the college to become a state institution on March 14, 1861.

A new hospital opened in April of 1861 that was three stories high with a bed capacity of 80 and a bathroom and water closet on each floor!
In 1893, a second medical college arose two blocks from the Egyption Building, the University College of Medicine.

The new college was composed of medicine, dentistry, and pharmacy. Twenty years later, the two schools consolidated to become.....

Georgia Floods were devastating. Another Peace Treaty was made on the White House South Lawn between The Hashimite Kingdom of Jordan and The State of Israel ending six decades of hostilities. The United States went to the brink of invading Haiti. Its poor, unsettled neighbor to the south. But at the last minute Haiti's military rulers bowed to the United Nations and promised to cede power to the duly elected president whom they had ousted, Jean-Bertrand Aristide. Civil War continued to rack Bosnia-Herzegovina despite efforts of a United Nations Peacekeeping force. Tens of thousands of firefighters fought a summer-long battle against scores of fires that burned more than three million acres of woodland across the parched Western states.

The School of Medicine at MCV/VCU, in collaboration with the other two Medical Schools in the State of Virginia, has embarked on a major initiative to promote the entry of more of our medical graduates into generalist careers. This initiative, known as the Virginia Generalist Physician Initiative, is supported by supplemental funding from the State as well as by one of fourteen grants awarded to Medical Schools by the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation for this purpose. The goal of the initiative is to have at least 50% of the graduates of the Medical School enter generalist careers by the year 2000.

To achieve this goal the School of Medicine is restructuring every aspect of its activities, from admissions to curriculum as well as graduate medical education. In the admissions area we are changing the structure of the admissions committee to include more generalist physicians. We have initiated a number of programs to identify candidates who would be interested in a generalist career, with particular emphasis on those who are likely to go into practice in medically underserved areas of Virginia.

Beginning with the entering class in 1995, the students will spend one afternoon a week, in generalist physicians offices. This increased exposure to generalist practice will familiarize our students with aspects of primary care to which they have not been previously exposed. Some of the curriculum, including the teaching of physical diagnosis, will be transferred into the community. The students will continue spending time in physicians offices into the second year; their activities there will be supplemented by small group conferences which will be coordinated with what they see in the doctors' offices.

Graduate Medical Education will be restructured to favor generalist training. The changes will be phased in over a four-year period, and they will ultimately achieve over 50% of the output from the residencies being in the generalist area.

These changes will place the School of Medicine at MCV/VCU in the forefront of leadership in the country. The increased output of generalist physicians fulfills the needs of the Commonwealth. We fully expect that the changes in the curriculum, in addition to providing more primary care physicians for the state of Virginia, is also a better way of training physicians.
The School of Medicine began as part of the Medical Department of Hampden Sydney College when it opened in 1838. There were six faculty members and seven students. Today, there are about 675 enrolled students in the Medical program and 752 total faculty members. It includes:

- Department of Anatomical Sciences

Making Time For Fun
Travellin' with the Class Treasurer comes in handy.
The Student National Medical Association, Inc. (SNMA) was created out of a need to produce sensitive physicians to serve minority and indigent communities. Since its inception, the SNMA has not only focused on providing for its members avenues which foster an obligation to practice medicine within the minority community, but SNMA also serves the fraternal needs of the minority medical student.

The MCV-SNMA strives for the improvement of medical care, service to the community and the education and graduation of qualified minority physicians. Whether in the form of hypertension and sickle cell anemia screening, sponsoring youth visits to MCV, or through the orientation of high school and college age youth at our annual Health Careers Day, our commitment to community service still stands as our hallmark.

In addition, we will continue to address the needs of minority medical students by establishing camaraderie, speaking out on pertinent issues and offering academic and financial assistance.

The SNMA is alive and thriving and will continue as one of the most unique and vital student organizations, both nationally and locally here at the Medical College of Virginia.

Success,
to laugh often and much; to win the respect of intelligent people and the affection of children; to earn the appreciation of honest critics and endure the betrayal of false friends; to appreciate beauty; to find the best in others; to leave the world a little better place than we found it, whether by a healthy child, a garden, or a redeemed social condition; to know even one life breathed easier because you lived.
This is to have succeeded.

Harry Emerson Fosdick
In 1993, the School of Dentistry celebrated its centennial anniversary. At the same time, the dental hygiene program had its 25th birthday. Through its first 100 years, the School of Dentistry has produced two-thirds of the dentists in Virginia and many of its dental hygienists.

The School has become known for the quality of its programs and graduates. In the past 30 years, twelve alumni or faculty have gone on to become deans or higher at other institutions. Currently, four of the 54 U.S. dental school deans are products of our school, and one is President of Tufts University. To attest to the quality of our school, U.S. News and World Report, in the March 21, 1993 issue, ranked our school in the top fifteen in the country.

As we enter our second century of commitment to education, service, and research, we intend to maintain the standards of excellence established by our predecessors.

We wish our graduates the very best in a life of service to the public.

Dr. Lindsay M. Hunt
Dean of the School of Dentistry
The School of Dentistry began in 1893 as part of The College of Physicians and Surgeons. In 1913, this college merged with the Medical College of Virginia and the MCV School of Dentistry was formed. The first class had only three students, but it now has around 375 enrolled students and about 64 instructional faculty members. It includes:

- Program in Dental Hygiene
- Department of Endodontics
- Department of General Practice
- Department of Oral Pathology
- Department of Oral & Maxillofacial Surgery
- Department of Orthodontics
- Department of Pediatric Dentistry
- Department of Periodontics
- Department of Prosthodontics

THE ONES THAT MAKE IT HAPPEN.
The Ultimate measure of a man is not where he stands in moments of comfort and convenience, but where he stands during challenge and controversy.

I'm pleased to take this opportunity to comment to the students of 1994-95 as you, as future health care professionals prepare for the many changes that managed health care will bring to your professions in the 21st century.

Government and consumers in general appear to be convinced that health care costs too much today and they are going to modify the system significantly to "squeeze out the perceived fat". Gone will be the days of fee for service and the indiscriminate use of expensive technology to assess a patient's health status. Increasingly, we will see utilization of HMO's, group practices, and other similar programs that will provide "capitated services" wherein health providers must depend upon one another to complement each's expertise.

There will be many changes in the nature of what health professionals do and in the type of health professionals who provide various services. Many new health care specialists whether physician assistants, nurse practitioners or some new breed as yet to be named will increasingly become the gatekeepers to health care. My message to today's health professions students is to remain flexible and current with your knowledge base and apply it as needed so as to assure a satisfying and useful career.

John S. Ruggiero
Dean of The School of Pharmacy
The School of Pharmacy began as part of the curriculum of the Medical College of Virginia in 1838 when the school was founded. The General Assembly of Virginia gave the school the ability to confer the degree of Graduate Pharmacy in 1879. However, records show that there were two graduates in pharmacy in 1876. The school of Pharmacy of the Medical College of Virginia was officially established in 1898. Today, there are approximately 332 students enrolled, and approximately 65 faculty members. It also includes the Department of Medicinal Chemistry, and the Department of Pharmacy & Pharmaceutics.

Congratulations on your successes as a student of nursing. As dean it is my hope for you that through the years you will remember with fondness the experiences you had as a student and the friendships that you developed, some of which will last a lifetime.

Through the years, we, as your alma mater, will maintain our contact with you so that you know of our continuing progress and so that we can learn of your life and career. As we learn together my hope is for your continued involvement.

Thank you for having chosen to be a part of the proud heritage of VCU\MCV. Best wishes for a long and happy life and successful career.

My regards,
Nancy F. Langston, RN, PhD
Dean and Professor
The school of Nursing began in 1893 as part of the Virginia Hospital Training School. In 1913, this college merged with the Medical College of Virginia and the Medical College of Virginia School of Nursing was born. The first class in 1895 had two members. In 1920, MCV created Saint Phillips School of Nursing for Black students. An integrated school of Nursing began in 1962. Today, there are a total of 755 students enrolled in the MCV School of Nursing and 52 full-time faculty members. It includes the Department of Adult Health Nursing, the Department of Community & Psychiatric Nursing, Department of Maternal-Child Nursing, and the Department of Nursing Administration & Information Systems.

The School of Allied Health Professions is committed to offer, through the establishment and maintenance of rigorous standards of excellence, undergraduate and graduates education that will prepare students for professional careers in the several allied health disciplines. Development of professional attitudes, emotional maturity, and ethical behavior are vital components of the educational process. It is essential that students gain a deep respect for the dignity of man and the inherent rights of patients and others who receive services. The School’s nine departments are designed to include not only the development of skills to assure excellence in quality of health care, but also such factual knowledge and experiences that will provide the basis for continuing intellectual and professional growth.

Community services of the School include continuing education, consultative resources, and participation in all pertinent areas of health care. An integral part of these efforts is to stimulate and sponsor research activities within the School and to encourage interdisciplinary research. The nine department of the School are found on the opposing page.

The Medical College of Virginia / Student Government Association (SGA) represents the interests and concerns of all MCV students and encourages everyone to participate in its events. SGA works as a liaison between the student body and the University in an attempt to make the MCV experience enriching for every student. Each school elects members, and every member strives to make their constituents' opinions and suggestions heard. The executive committee is a governing board composed of seven voting members and is advised by Dr. Robert Clifton, Dean of Student Affairs. Our subcommittees handle a variety of issues, including student parking, social activities, the yearbook, the annual Formal Dance, and student grievances. The 1994-1995 executive committee members are: Maher Sangid, President; Robert Marzban, Vice-President Social; Brian Bienstock, Vice-President Parking; Ingrid McCarty, Secretary; Brett Dameron, Treasurer; Win Graham Gardner, Yearbook Editor; and J. Scott Taylor, Honor Council.

The 1995 X-RAY was printed by offset lithography by Deimar Printing & Publishing in Charlotte, North Carolina. The 204 page book had a press run of 1500 copies. Lithoflect glass and embossed papers were selected for the 8 1/2 x 11 book.

The dust cover was designed by Richard Grundy, a Dentistry '95 Student. The idea for the colorful cover was inspired by Dr. Seuss.

The hard cover used a buggywhip material, white silkscreen ink and embossing. It was designed by Sean Fessenden, a Dentistry '96 student.

Type styles used in the book include: CRITTER, CUTOUT, SCOOZ, EMYTHOS, TOOLBOX, Quake, Giddyup, Birdi, Times New Roman, Utopia Headline, and Myriad Tilt.

Professional Photography services were provided by CANDID COLOR PHOTOGRAPHY.

The Editors were:
Wm. Graham Gardner, Maher Sangid, and Sahana Vijay.
I would rather be ashes than dust. I would rather my spark should burn out in a blaze than it should be stifled by dry-rot. I would rather be a superb meteor, every atom of me in a magnificent glow than asleep and permanent as a planet. The proper function of a man is to live, not to exist. I shall not waste my days trying to prolong them. I shall use my time.
